

“STATION PARK”

Mixed-Use, Transit-Oriented Development to Become a Reality

Mayor Scott C. Harbertson

CenterCal Properties, the developer of Station Park, recently announced the purchase of the 62-acre parcel located adjacent and south of Park Lane and east of I-15. Station Park is slated to become the pre-eminent lifestyle shopping center in the Salt Lake City region.

The project will include approximately 800,000 square feet of retail, entertainment, restaurants, and office space with approximately 150 housing units located within the second floor space of the lifestyle center.

Equally important to Farmington is the primary access road into Station Park (off Park Lane) which will also serve the Commuter Rail Station and Park & Ride facility to be located east and adjacent to Station Park. CenterCal officials have announced construction will commence on the access road along with other site preparation work in late 2007.

CenterCal, UTA, and Farmington City are working towards completing and approving design details with regards to the road to the station and the pedestrian connection between the Commuter Rail Station and the Station Park Lifestyle Center. It is hoped, but not guaranteed, that the road into the Station will be completed by the time the commuter rail opens for business in mid- to late April 2008. Station Park itself is slated to open in late 2009.

FARMINGTON CITY SEEKING A RECORDING SECRETARY

Farmington Festival Days was a great success. This year's festivities included a 5K, a 10K, and a new event, a half marathon. The evening showing of "Charlotte's Web" drew a crowd that filled the park to capacity, and the celebration closed with a crowd-pleasing fireworks spectacular.

Despite temperatures that hovered near 100 degrees, over 375 residents participated in the foot races. Your fastest Farmington friends are listed on page 6. For a complete list of race results, please go the city's website, farmington.utah.gov.

CITY COUNCIL CREATES NEW PARKS & RECREATION DEPARTMENT

The City Council, at its July 17 City Council meeting, created Farmington's first Parks & Recreation Department by combining the Leisure Services Department with the Parks division from the Public Works Department. This change was brought about by the resignation of Viola Kinney, Leisure Services Director, who is seeking a career change. She has served in this capacity for the past 12 years. Viola has done a terrific job, and City officials wish her the very best.

Viola Kinney
Leisure Services Director for Past 12 Years

Mayor Harbertson, with the advice and consent of the City Council, appointed Neil Miller as Director of the newly formed Parks & Recreation Department. Neil has been serving the City as the Parks Superintendent for the past 15 years. The recommendation for the creation of the new department along with the appointment of its first director was made by City Manager, Max Forbush. ■

The Farmington Historical Museum is in need of volunteers. The Museum is currently open each Wednesday afternoon from 1:00 to 4:00 and on special occasions. Please don't hesitate to volunteer---whether you are a long-time resident or a new arrival who wants to learn about our rich history, the museum offers a wonderful learning experience. If you are interested, please contact Annette Tidwell at 451-2357 or Julia Haugen at 451-7356.

A big thanks to all the committee members and generous citizens who contributed time, talents and materials to make Festival Days a gathering to remember. Thanks also to the Farmington City Planning Commission and city employees who worked hard to make Festival Days possible.

Want to get more involved in future Festival Days? Volunteers are needed for next year's committees. If you are interested, please call Kathy Rodriguez, Special Events Coordinator at 309-8497. ■

Have you seen one of these insect traps around Farmington? The Utah State Department of Agriculture has placed surveillance traps in our community for early detection of the Japanese Beetle. These highly destructive insects eat plants, shrubs and trees and roots of lawn grass. Infestation is a statewide threat. For complete information on the eradication of Japanese Beetles, please check the UDAF website at www.ag.utah.gov.

commission, the city council and the state legislature-reveal Marda's awareness of the inevitability of change, as well as her unwavering commitment to direct that change for public good.

We talked with Marda at her Farmington residence, where she shared with us her expansive view of the community she calls home. We hope you'll enjoy sharing a bit of our conversation.

Jill: Many of us love the Farmington community, but few of us get actively involved in public life. You've devoted a tremendous amount of time and energy to this community. What drew you into public service?

Marda: It's always been my passion to just serve. But 43 years ago, my husband and I had a dream to live in one of the little communities of Davis County. We've been in Farmington now for 33 years.

asked to serve on the city planning commission, and when your term was up, you decided to run for city council. Was that a hard decision to make?

Marda: Earlier I had run for a position on the school board and had lost. So I was a little apprehensive about running for city council, and I saw that it was sort of a man's world, politically, at that time. But once I make up my mind, I give it my all. It was the very first time there were two women running. Pat Achter was running from the south end, and I was up here on the north end. I think both of us were thinking 'there is no way two women are going to be elected,' but we both did, and we became best friends.

Jill: I know while you were on the city council, you were very influential in working with Lagoon to put in the trail. Later, as a state legislator, you were quick to foresee the tremendous challenges our county is now facing with transportation. In both of those and many other instances, you've been instrumental in directing change in such a way that it enhances our quality of life. You must feel a deep sense of accomplishment.

Marda: Well, people are the real reward. You accomplish things you feel really good about, but those things are insignificant compared to the relationships you make and just the good feelings you have and the love you have for the community and the state. I have loved my time serving.

Marda Dillree has devoted her life to family and community, and as a consequence, our quality of life as residents of Farmington is better. Many thanks to you, Marda Dillree! ■

Marda Dillree

a legacy of public service

From the back deck of her home in north Farmington, Marda Dillree can overlook property that wasn't even accessible by road when she and her husband, Steve, purchased it nearly three decades ago. Beyond pastures and scattered fence lines, beyond wooded slopes broken by the rooftops of her neighbors, lies the valley Marda loves. It's a valley she knows well, both geographically and politically. Her many years of serving in public offices-including the PTA, the city planning

When we first moved here, everybody knew everybody, from north Farmington to south Farmington, and our children all went to the same school. When people started talking about busing students to Bountiful, my husband and I didn't like it. We moved here because we wanted our kids in the country. So I got involved with the PTA, and that's how it all started.

Jill: At one point, you were
